

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE CRISIS."—William N. Selig's ten part visualization of Winston Churchill's immortal novel on the American Civil War, will be presented tomorrow and Thursday. Tickets for the production are now on sale at the theatre. There will be two performances each day, the matinee beginning at 2:15 P. M., and the evening performance at 8:15. The scenes of "The Crisis," are laid in St. Louis between the years of 1850 and 1861, at Vicksburg, Miss., during the siege of Vicksburg, and in Washington, D. C., during Lincoln's administration, 1861-1865. The picture is a charming result of a careful mingling of laughter and pathos, drama and action, though the battle scenes are realistic and wonderful, they never for a moment overshadow the charm of the romantic. The production portrays a human Lincoln, therefore, the Lincoln of both the spoken and the new and broader drama of the screen have been mere historic figureheads. The historic and dramatic drama, the very question that finally set the country in a blaze of civil war: "Can the people of a United States exclude slavery from it limits prior to the formation of a state constitution?" Throughout the play the romance of war overtops its red horror and for the first time the North and South can sit together in the theatre and see their respective causes impartially set forth and sympathetically portrayed.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THE BOTTLE IMP."—A five part Paramount production, starring Sessue Hayakawa, the noted Japanese actor, is being presented today. The story of "The Bottle Imp," has to do with the adventures of a poor fisherman, Luyaka, who seeks a girl of royal blood as his wife. The bottle grants every wish but yet has terrible menace. The entire story is filled with unusual and startling incidents. The majority of the scenes were taken in the same facilities about which the story is laid, the Lasky company leading the star and his company to Hawaii for that purpose. Mr. Hayakawa's leading woman, Lohua Wapahu, is a descendant of Queen Liliuokalani, and is one of the most talented amateur actresses on the island. Many of the scenes were filmed on the famous Hawaii estate. The company secured the volcanic scenes by descending deep into the crater of Kilauea, a volcano, and were nearly overcome by the sulphuric gases. With the exception of Guy Oliver, the drunken sailor, the entire company is composed of either Japanese or Hawaiian players. The story is one of the most unusual the Lasky-Paramount has ever offered.

SOISSON THEATRE.

"THE DANGER TRAIL."—A five reel drama featuring the great H. B. Warner and taken from James Oliver Curwood's novel of the Canadian woods, is also featured today. Mollie King is also featured in the second episode of the "Mystery of the Double Cross." In this episode Peter Hale is thwarted in a bold attempt to discover the identity of the girl branded with the mark of the double cross. Tomorrow is Bluebird day and Dorothy Phillips is featured in "The Girl in the Checked Coat." She enacts a dual role with remarkable cleverness. It is the story of a covetous relative who seeks to dispose of Mary by selling her pickpocket sister against her. Thursday, Peggy Hyland in "Babette."

ORPHEUM THEATRE.

"POTS AND PANS."—Charming Glands Huletto in one of those roles that have endeared her to countless thousands of admirers, makes an adorable little heroine as "Peggy." It is the interesting story of a Peggy, who is established in a wealthy home till she is fixing things right. She also gets possession of some stolen war plans and returns them to the War Department. Charlie Chaplin in "Charlie, the Chicken Chaser," a one reel comedy. Tomorrow, Mrs. Fox presents Genevieve Humpers, in "Fangled Venetian," a very interesting drama. Also Uncle Sam's Defenders No. 5, "The Victory Runway" in featured in "High Play," a five reel musical drama.

ARCADE THEATRE.

J. A. Lyons presented his "Amorcan Melodrama" at the Arcade last night to capacity audiences in the reddest musical comedy, "Two Battles of Drandywine," which is a riot of laughs from the rise to the fall of the curtain. Irving Lewis, the principal funster, had the house with him with every move, and to see him is to chase the blues. Georgiouly costumed stage beauties in the person of seven charming damsels, add a classy color scheme to the present bill. Every member of this talented company is deserving of special mention. The Harmony Trio, composed of Misses Stevens and Grant and Ash and Mack, delight with their general numbers. Allen and O'Malley are just about the best sister team and their dancing is superlative. Miss May Allen, the girl with the laughing eyes, pleased the most critical. Miss Stevens and chorus delighted with her specialty, "He May Be Old, But He Has Young Ideas." Elaborate electrical effects were brought into play in the number, "Sunshine of Virginia," by Miss Everett and chorus. For Wednesday and Thursday the same company will present "The Landlord," a vehicle built for speed in the laugh game.

CLEARFIELD MAN GIVEN PHYSICAL DIRECTOR'S JOB

John Cramer Called to Scottsdale
If He Is Not Summoned for Duty at the Front.

MORE GARDENING URGED

Civic Club's Contest Is Bringing About Big Change in Aspect of Town. But More Planting Is Desired; Officers of Epworth League.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTSDALE, May 15.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. on Friday evening, the retiring officers, Robert Skene, Dr. J.
P. Strickler, Dr. A. Walde, and Joseph Zimmers, were all unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year. The board also decided to extend a call to John Cramer of Clearfield to be physical director provided he is not called to the service at the front.

The board also recommended that an acre of ground be secured for the purpose of gardening and trucking, the returns from this to be applied to the Y. M. C. A. war fund.

Scouts Hold Cooking Test.
Boy Scout Troop, No. 1, on Friday evening held a cooking contest. Scoutmaster A. S. Strouse took the boys to Campbell's Woods, arriving at 5.30 o'clock. The boys were very hungry after the hike and soon had their supper cooked. After the supper they biked back to their homes.

The new officers of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal church were installed after a short service conducted by the retiring president on Sunday evening. They were: President, Miss Lucille C.
Terbush; first vice president, Miss
Naomi Trout; second vice president, Miss Elizabeth Rhodes; third vice president, Miss Fannie Smith; fourth vice president, Miss Edith Myers; secretary, Miss Jessie Dinger; treasurer, Miss Catherine McBurney; and pianist, Miss Norma Keller.

Large Gardening.
The Civic club is still urging people to make gardens and for that purpose have a few gardens left to give people who have been unable to obtain gardens. Already the Civic club back yard and garden contest has made the back yards in Scottsdale take on a different aspect and the indies in the clubs are very much pleased about the way the people are taking hold of the matter. Miss Emma Gibson has charge of the vacant lots that may be had for gardening purposes and will be only too glad to show these lots to people and give them to the persons to whose homes they are most convenient.

Truck in Parade.
The Brownstown fire department took their truck to Mount Pleasant last evening and put it in the parade where it made an excellent showing.
Soon to Lift Charter.
The Farmers' Loan association will have another meeting at the office of their secretary-treasurer, F. C. Wray, on Thursday evening. By that time they will be almost ready to lift their charter.

It Costs One-Fourth Less to Operate a New Process Gas Range Than Any Other Make

Under priced gas ranges mean over high gas bills. The first cost of a gas range is a small matter comparatively—it is the cost of the operation the year around that counts.

NEW PROCESS GAS RANGES ARE THE BEST MADE. And mind you, this is not just a careless, uttered statement, made to influence your selection of a gas range here. This statement is founded on facts and figures that proved conclusively that the above statement is correct and if anything a little too conservative.

Wouldn't you like to reduce your gas bills 25%?

JUSTICE BETTER THAN CONTROL.

In this message at the opening of Congress last December, President Wilson assured the American consumers of food that it was the unyielding determination of the administration to fight down the food gamblers and punish them with a severity measured by the enormity of their offenses. Almost six months later, without any appreciable progress having been made in the direction of curbing the activities of those who have been engaged in the shameless exploitation of the necessities of human existence.

Such efforts as have been made towards a solution of the food problem have centered upon evolving a system of control in the manufacture, storage and distribution of food. Meanwhile, without let or hindrance, the conscienceless speculators have been permitted to increase their toll upon the pockets of the poor, the middle class, and the well-to-do alike. Long before President Wilson gave his pledge at the opening of Congress last December, the administration was already well aware that the pernicious activities of the food gamblers, not any unusual economic reasons, was the cause of the excessively high prices of food.

Nothing was done then, nor has anything been done since, to afford a patient, long-suffering public any protection from the unscrupulous and insatiable greed of the food gamblers. It is time to tell some unbigoted Democratic newspapers have boasted of the rising tide of living costs as proof of the superlative beneficence of a Democratic administration, and the publication of every such "proof" has been the cue for another boost by the food speculators.

So loud has the cry recently become for relief from a well-nigh intolerable condition that the administration has formulated a food control bill. This calls for a survey of the food supply of the country by the Agricultural Department and would give that department power to license the production, storage and distribution of food. The measure paves the way, if it is not actually authorized, the creation of the office of food dictator.

Energized and well intentioned as may be the effort now being made to secure the enactment of the proposed law, which is being bitterly opposed by a powerful lobby of food speculators, these efforts and the passage of the law cannot and will not make amends for the recklessness of the administration in dealing with the food sharks up to this time. Control of food supply by government action will become a measure of necessity before the war has progressed very far. The proposed law seems to make adequate provision for this purpose. The people will adapt themselves to it with readiness and in good spirit if it completely and effectively eliminates food speculation as an element in the cost to consumers. Even then it will be a long time for the law, however good, to be its advantage, to compensate the people for the tribute they have been obliged to pay the pirates who have grown rich upon the hungry and scant provisions of our land. Neither will they quite forget how differently pledged for relief from this evil have been kept.

A wise and just system of licensed food control is desirable, but neither and stern justice to the unlicensed food controllers would have been better.

CONNELLSVILLE COAL MARKETS.

The maintenance of the supremacy of the Connelville region as the source of the raw material for making by-product coke is dependent upon more factors than has been the maintenance of the supremacy of the Connelville region as the source of the raw material for making by-product coke. This fact is made apparent from the testimony of Charles C. Ransburg as a witness for the Connelville Coal Traffic Association before the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission, in answer to the protest of the Clearfield coal operators against the reduced freight rates on coal shipped from the Connelville region.

On the whole, Mr. Ransburg's testimony constitutes one of the most illuminating contributions that have yet been made to the history of the by-product coke industry. It sets forth with convincing clearness the reasons why Connelville coal is essential to the production of the best by-product coke and shows to what extent the industry is dependent upon the Connelville region as a source of supply of raw material, while it also reveals the conditions under which certain by-product coke producing sections may become independent of Connelville coal. Facts are presented which establish beyond question the urgent necessity for maintaining such rates of freight on coal from the Connelville region as will make it possible for consumers at distant points in the east to secure Connelville coal at a delivered cost not exceeding the cost of coals which are competitive.

While experience has proven that Connelville coal is richest in by-products the best results from the furnace stand point are secured when an admixture of a low volatile coal is used with the Connelville product. At the same time, experiments and practical tests of medium high volatile coals have demonstrated their adaptability for use without admixture with Connelville coal, hence such coals become competitive whenever or wherever available upon a freight rate not exceeding that from the Connelville region. Mr. Ransburg points out that coal from northern West Virginia belongs to this class and predicts that there will be a heavy inflow of this coal to the eastern by-product plants if the present freight rates from the Connelville region are not maintained. In support of this reference was made to the fact that the life of several important contracts for by-product coal from the Connelville region are dependent upon the freight rate, and in case the present rate is not allowed to remain in effect, the buyers of coal will be obliged to go to a West Virginia coal having a more favorable freight rate.

Improvements in the construction and operation of by-product ovens are constantly being made, and many plants are already operating on Connelville coal alone, but only at points where the freight rates on low volatile coals are so high that admixture of them with Connelville coal would add largely to the cost of the coke produced. To expand the markets of Connelville coal for by-product use, and to hold those in the east, it is necessary to keep the cost of the coal low. Therefore, the freight rates must be such as will enable the Connelville region to compete with other districts producing coals which, while not measuring up to the Connelville standard in all essentials, have by practical use demonstrated that they are adapted to the production of usable metallurgical fuel.

NOT A BANK'S BUSINESS.

There seems to be absolutely no limit to the unreasonableness or impracticability of some of the measures introduced in the Legislature, not to speak of the utterly vicious character of still others. There is also a great propensity upon part of some of the so-called lawmakers to propose bills which, if enacted into laws, would place all sorts of burdens, restrictions and limitations upon individuals, corporations and institutions.

Among measures of this character is one introduced by Senator Vane, of Philadelphia, which is presumably designed to curtail personal property tax dodgers. By the provisions of the bill every person in the state over 21 years of age is required to make a personal property tax return. If the person possesses any taxable personal property, and to swear that he possesses none if such be the case.

One of the sections of the bill makes it unlawful for any bank or other depository in the state to accept a coupon or other similar evidence of the possession of a bond or other interest bearing security without requiring the depositor to accompany the deposit with a blank, provided for the act, setting forth the character of the security and the name and address of the owner thereof. These blanks, which must be retained by the banks, etc., shall be available to the assessors in their efforts to find "dodgers" of the personal property tax.

The provision that all persons of a legal age must make returns, makes it the duty of the assessor of each township or ward or other tax district to see that the returns are made. The effect of the enactment of this bill would be to turn the banks of the country into a sort of detective agency and penalize them for failure to betray all the concealment existing between honest and dishonest customers. None will deny that persistent tax dodgers should be required to bear their just and proper share of taxation, but the banking institutions should not be burdened with the duty of compelling them to do so. That should be a function of the tax gathering agencies only.

The Kaiser trusts an American to fix his feet. With equal confidence can he trust a few million Americans, soon to be in training, to extract the trouble-making influence with neatness and dispatch, but without the administration of an anesthetic.

A little taste of freedom is giving some Russians a bigger head than their vodka used to do.

The Ways and Means committee of Congress is overlooking a profitable source of revenue by not imposing a tax on the objections filed against the proposed revenue bill.

Except for the saving grace, common sense and sound citizenship of Senator Kutz and a few others what fool bill "critics" and amendments.

Transplanting Garden Plants

If you have started garden plants indoors in seed boxes or pots, you must take great care in transplanting them, says today's bulletin from the National Food Garden Commission, which is collaborating with The Courier in urging food garden planting to cut the cost of living.

Transplanting is a crisis in the life of a young plant, and weak ones often cannot stand it. Therefore select the sturdiest plants. You must "harden off" indoor plants before setting them in the garden—that is, gradually let them get accustomed to the exposure. This is done first by setting the seed boxes and plants in open windows and reducing the amount of water given to them.

But do not let the boxes become so dry that the plants will. Gradually increasing the exposure, after a few days you can leave the plants outdoors uncovered all day and even on mild nights. Then they are ready for transplanting. The hardening process requires about two weeks when the weather is still cool.

When the plants are growing in pots, berry boxes or in the garden sides of water, the transplanting is easy. From clay pots plants, roots and soil will usually come out in a single lump. This should be set in the garden a little deeper than the seed was when planted. The bottoms of the berry boxes should be cut off.

From the seed box transplanting is harder. If possible take the young plants up with sufficient soil so that their roots are not exposed. If the dirt shakes off, then you must "prickle" the roots by dipping them into thin mud. Do this immediately so that the roots are not exposed to the air on the way to the garden.

Work swiftly in the garden, setting the plants in holes punched with a round stick. Press the soil just enough to give the roots thorough contact with the earth, allowing no air spaces to remain under the surface.

A cloudy day or just before nightfall is the best time for transplanting. Ordinarily it is not necessary to water the freshly transplanted seedlings.

would not be passed by Congress?

Young men to the number of 118,000 have one chance to escape conscription. The regular army needs that many recruits to bring it to full war strength.

The surprising discovery has been made by some speculators that food speculators are "plutocrats and robbers."

Old Pennsylvania keeps its rightful place as leader in supplying patriots for service with the colors.

The young ladies of the Dunbar township high school are furnishing their stories of Connelville in graduating costumes in no way except that they have cut the cost in half.

In principle, ruthless taxation is no better than ruthless looting, warfare, in either case the weak suffer proportionately more than strong.

ANOTHER SLACKER.

That citizen is somewhat phoney who heuristics into matrimony, that he may dodge the draft; it ought to shame him, not, does he him, to see how people look upon him, upon the streets. Methinks I see him humbly kneeling, his voice all choked with maddening feeling, before some maiden, fair, and saying, "I have no other choice, I'll have to mingle with men whom I abhor; I have no use for soldiers' labors. ## MT. PLEASANT HAS BIGGEST PARADE IN ITS HISTORY

Head of Line Is Returning to Frick Park as End Is Just Leaving.

ZUNDELL UNFURLS BANNER

Commander of Company E. Selected in Fling Old Glory to the Breeze
Speaker Declares He Never Saw So Many Nations Under One Flag.

Special to The Courier.

Mount Pleasant, May 15.—Mount Pleasant had the largest parade in its history last evening. When the last of the line was leaving Frick park to go down Main street to the east end of town, which is considered almost a mile, the head of the parade was coming up Washington street almost ready to turn back into the park.

The parade was headed by Chief Marshal T. O. Anderson and in it were Polish, Slavish and Italian organizations marching four, six and eight abreast. The bands in the parade were the Municipal band, the Scottsdale band, the Ligonier H. C. Frick Coke Company band, the Carpenter's band, Standard band, Slavish band, Stauffer band, the House-Lorman band, the drum corps. Several floats were entered by the Red Cross, they having been made by Harry Brown, superintendent at Central. Miss Elizabeth Bradstock, president of the unit, had her machine made into a truck and had E. C. C. on it. Wm. F. Smith had his truck made into a Red Cross float. The P. H. C. degree team rode on a truck; the Red Cross had two trucks; J. E. Hoffer had his truck in line and Moorewood had several trucks and floats in the parade.

The members of Company E. Tenth Regiment, led by their captain, James E. Zundell, led the parade. They were followed by the Patriarch Militants, the Old Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Military Mouse, the Red Men and the Fire department, and St. Joseph's congregation, led by Rev. John Kachet.

Two hundred and fifty men rode on horseback, most of the horses being from the H. C. Frick works. When the parade marched into Frick park the flag was unfurled by Captain James Zundell of Company E. Tenth Regiment. Hon. James Beahm of Greensburg made an excellent address. He told the mass of people that never before in his life had he seen so many nationalities banded together under speakers who represented the Assyrian and Italian people.

The parade for Mount Pleasant's Memorial Day under the Sons of Veterans with F. S. Dullinger as chief Marshal, was announced. James Keegan of Everson was introduced and

SCRATCHED 10 YEARS HEALED IN ONE WEEK Finally Cured by Using One Dollar Bottle of Amolox.

One bottle of Amolox cured me. For ten years I suffered with eczema, of the scalp, my head being covered with scales and scabs. I tried everything recommended and everything advised without relief until I bought a bottle of Amolox. It relieved the itching at once and one bottle entirely cured my eczema. I heartily and cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers of this horrible disease.

Amolox Ointment alone will quickly banish pimples, blackheads and take out all redness of the skin and cure most forms of skin disease. Sall, chronic cases of Eczema, Psoriasis, Scabies, that have lasted for years, yield more quickly when both ointment and pills are used.

Send postal for free sample to Amolox Laboratories, Cincinnati, Ohio. Try Amolox today. It will also help if it fails to do what is claimed or if money will be cheerfully paid back by Connellsville Drug Co.

Elizabeth Gratz, aged 13 years, died at her East End home on Sunday of spinal meningitis after a short illness. Elizabeth was one of the Gratz twins. Funeral services will be held this afternoon and interment made in the local cemetery.

Seniors Give Play.
The Senior Class of the Mount Pleasant township high school gave "The Village Lawyer," a comedy drama in four acts at the high school auditorium on Friday evening to a packed house. The round about round of applause that followed the characters as they left the stage left no room for doubt that the play was greatly appreciated.

Corns Drive You Mad! Try 'Gets-It' and They'll Peel Right Off!
Too big? It was murder to put on my shoe. I used knives and other things that ate off more of the toe than they did the corn. I'd cut and dig with knives and scissors, but now no more fooling for me. Two drops of 'Gets-It' did all the work. It makes the corn shrivel and get so loose that you can just pick it right off with your fingers.
There has been nothing new discovered for corns since 'Gets-It' was born. It's the new way—the common sense, simple, sure way. 'Gets-It' is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

A Practical Way to Make

COCONUT CUSTARD PIE
1 can of Baker's Fresh Grated Coconut, 1/2 cupful of sugar, pinch of salt, 24 egg whites, 1/2 cup milk, 2 eggs.

Beat eggs, milk, sugar and salt together; add can of coconut; pour into pie tin lined with pie crust. Bake in moderate oven on bottom rack thirty to thirty-five minutes, or until set. Try with silver knife; if knife comes out dry the pie is done; if the egg and coconut separate it has baked too long. This fills a seven-inch pie of regular size. The crust is made as follows:
Sift one cupful of flour, pinch of salt into bowl; add two level tablespoons of pure lard for double any other shortening; rub in lightly until well mixed; add enough cold water to hold together. Roll out on floured board the better the crust will be. Roll out on floured board. This will make a high edge on the pie.

DIRECTORS FIND 1917 GIRLS ARE VERY GOOD COOKS

Dinner, Planned, Prepared and Served by Students, 14 Served at Library.

Can the high school girls cook? Do the girls get any real benefit from a domestic science course?

These questions were very satisfactorily answered to 12 men who partook of a dinner, planned, prepared and served by the girls of the class of 1917 in the domestic science department in the directors' room of the Carnegie library at 4 o'clock last evening. The guests were Directors J. R. Davis, C. R. Heitzel, Omer Wood, R. K. Long, W. W. Smith, J. W. Ralston and W. W. Haines, Superintendent S. P. Ashe, Principal B. B. Smith, Solicitor H. G. May, W. F. Brooks and W. P. Sherman.

The dinner was served at a long table adorned solely by a pretty centerpiece of sweet peas. The place cards were handpainted—also the work of the girls. Two of the students were assigned to do the serving. The remainder all had a hand in the preparation. First came tasty grapefruit, then some especially good tomato soup, breaded veal cutlets, scalloped potatoes and patien of peas, fruit salad, cake, gelatine and coffee. The only thing the girls did not cook was the box of cigars that was passed around after the dinner. Superintendent Ashe provided these. Everything was mighty good and all of the guests said so. This service was fine, too, and the girls were complimented on this, as well.

Afterwards Miss Anna Reynolds, domestic science teacher, and the girls came up stairs and Director Ralston expressed his pleasure at such evidence of proficiency in the culinary art. Miss Reynolds, responding on behalf of the class, gave all the credit to her pupils.

The girls who served the dinner were: Nell Woods, Emma Bridgier, Wilda Hetrick, Eva Showman, Nellie Stillwagon, Bessie Kincaid, Lorene Cupp, Helen Heinrich, Mary Gallagher, Edna Raymond, Mary Florence Wingrove, Margaret Wishart, Feme Lucius, Dorothy Edmunds, Flossie Raichel, Loren Strahle, Louise Wrote, Ida Walk and Catharine Butler.

This was the first dinner of its kind served by the high school girls—largely because no suitable place for holding one had ever been discovered. Domestic science is elective by high school pupils after the Freshman year.

Are Women Naturally Despondent?

While there are women who seem always despondent and depressed and expecting misfortune, that is not woman's natural condition. Such unfortunate suffer from ill-health. An abnormal condition of the system expresses itself in nervousness, sleeplessness, backaches, headaches and despondency.

If all ailing women would make faithful use of that grand remedy for woman's ills, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, there would be little occasion to ask if despondency is natural to woman.—Adv.

"Fella name' Smith. He's showin' em how to cut too many corners—necessarily," he calls it. First thing he knows, they'll get the concrete up where the high water won't bust it out."

Stanton's laugh was impatient.

"Don't make any mistake of that sort, Simms," he said. "We don't want the dam destroyed; we'd work just as hard as they would to prevent that. All we want is to have other people think it's likely to go out—think it's hard enough to keep them from putting up any more money. Let that go. Is there any more fresh talk—among the men?" Stanton yielded himself a little upon the underground wire-pulling which had resulted in putting Simms on the ground as the keeper of the construction-camp canteen. It was a fairly original way of keeping a lie-lying one open for the camp gossip.

"Little," said the cringing body. "This here black-blank fella Smith's been tellin' William that I let to be 'an off the reservation,' says the 'babe' puts the brakes on for speed."

"So it does," agreed Stanton musingly. "But I guess you can stay while longer. I have a notion that Smith's been sent here—by some outfit, that means to buck us. If he hasn't any backing—"

The interruption was the hurried coming of the young man with sleepy eyes and the cigarette stains on his fingers, and for once in a way he was stirred out of his customary attitude of cynical indifference.

"Smith and Colonel Baldwin are over yonder in Kinzie's private office," he reported hastily. "Before they shut he door I heard Baldwin introducing Smith as the new acting financial secretary of the Timanyoni Ditch company."

CHAPTER IX.

When Creek Meets Creek.

Smith allowed himself to be brief seconds for a swift eye-measure of the square-shouldered, stockily built man in a gray face and stubbly mustache sitting in the chair of authority at the Brewster City National before he chose his line of attack.

"We are not going to cut very deeply into your time this morning, Mr. Kinzie," he began with the eye-measure and given him his cue. "You know the history of Timanyoni Ditch up to the present, and—well, to cut out the details, there is to be a complete reorganization of the company on a new basis, and we are here to offer to take your personal allotment of the stock."

"If your hands are set for cash, Colonel Baldwin has stipulated that his friends in the original deal must be protected, too."

"Here, here—hold on," interrupted the bank president; "you're hitting it up a little bit too fast for me, Mr. Smith. Who are you, and whereabouts do you hold forth when you are at home?"

Smith laughed easily. "If we were going to borrow money of you, we'd have to go into preliminaries and particulars, Mr. Kinzie. We are not alone in the fight for the water rights on the other side of the river, as you know, and until we are satisfied we shall have to be prudent. What we want to know now is this: 'Will you let us protect you by taking your Timanyoni Ditch stock as part?'"

Kinzie met the issue fairly. "I don't know you yet, Mr. Smith; but I do know Colonel Baldwin. Here, and I guess I'll take a chance on things as they stand. I'll keep my stock."

The new secretary's smile was rather patronizing that instant.

"As you please, Mr. Kinzie, of course," he said smoothly. "But I'm going to tell you frankly that you'll keep it at your own risk. I am not sure what plan will be adopted, but I assume it will be authorization and a retirement of the stock of the original company. The voting control of the old stock we already have, as you know."

The banker pursed his lips until the starchy gray mustache stood out stiffly. Then he cut straight to the heart of the matter.

"You mean that there will be a majority pool of the old stock, and that the pool will ignore those stockholders who don't come in?"

"Something like that," said Smith pleasantly. And then: "We're going to be generously liberal, Mr. Kinzie; we are giving Colonel Baldwin's friends a fair chance to come in and put of the wet. Of course, if they refuse to come in—if they prefer to stay out—"

Kinzie was smiling sourly.

"You'll have to take care of your own banker, won't you, Mr. Smith?" he asked. "Why don't you loosen up and tell a little more? What have you fellows got up your sleeve, anyway?"

At this, the new financial manager checked off on the hazy of secrecy a little—just a little.

"Mr. Kinzie, we've got the biggest thing, and the surest, that ever came to Timanyoni Ditch; not in future plans, but in facts already as good as accomplished. If it were necessary—as it isn't—I could go to New York to do so, and put a million dollars behind our reorganization plan in twenty-four hours. You'd say so yourself if I were at liberty to explain. But again you're dodging and wasting your time and ours. Think the matter over—about your stock—and let me know before noon. It's rather early to hurry you now, but there is precious little time left."

"You sit right down there, young man, and put a little of this precious time of yours against mine," said Kinzie, pointing authoritatively at the chair which Smith had just vacated. "You mustn't go off at half-cock, that way. You'll need a bank here to do business with, won't you?"

Smith did not sit down. Instead, he smiled genially and drew his hand out. "No, Mr. Kinzie; we shall need a bank—just not as a matter of absolute necessity. In fact, on some accounts I don't know but that it would be better for us not to have one."

"Sit down," insisted the bank president; and this time he would take no denial. Then he turned abruptly upon Baldwin, who had been playing his part of the silent listener letter-perfect.

"Baldwin, we are old friends, and I'd trust you to the limit—on any proposition, that doesn't ask for more than the straight-from-the-shoulder honesty. How much is this young friend of ours talking through his hat?"

"Not any, whatever, Dave. He's got the goods," Baldwin was wise enough to limit himself carefully as to quantity in his reply.

Again the banker made a casual, belated brush of his cropped mustache. "I want your business, Dexter; I've got to have it. But I'm going to be plain with you. You two are asking me to believe that you've gone outside and dug up a new bunch of backers. That may be all right, but Timanyoni Ditch has struck a pretty big home that maybe your new backers know about—and maybe they don't. You've had a lot of bad luck, so far; getting you land titles cleared, and all that; and you're going to have more, I've—"

It was Smith's turn again and he cut in promptly.

"That is precisely what I was driving at. Our banker can't run with the hare and hunt with the hounds. You'll excuse me if I say that you haven't been altogether fair with Timanyoni Ditch, or with Colonel Baldwin, Mr. Kinzie. A friendly banker doesn't help sell out his customer. You know that, as well as I do. Still, you did it."

Kinzie threw up his hands and tried to defend himself. "It was a straight business transaction, Mr. Smith. As long as we're in the banking business, we buy and sell for anybody who comes along."

"No, we don't, Mr. Kinzie; we protect our customers first. In the present instance you thought your customer was a dead one, anyway, so it wouldn't make much difference if you should throw another shovelful of dirt or so onto the coffin. Wasn't that the way of it?"

The president was fairly pushed to the ropes, and he showed it.

"Answer me one question, both of you," he snapped. "Are you big enough to fight for your own against Stanton's crew?"

"You'll see; and the sight is going to cost you something," said Smith, and the blandest of all could have been no smoother than his tone.

"Is that right, Dexter?"

"That's the way it looks to me, Dave," said the ranchman capitalist, who, whatever might be his limitations in the field of high finance, was not lacking the nerve to fight unquestioning in any partner's quarrel.

The president of the Brewster City National turned back to Smith.

"What do you want, Mr. Smith?" he asked, not too cordially.

"Nothing that you'd give me, I guess; a little business loyalty, for one thing—"

"And a checking balance for immediate necessities for another?" suggested the banker.

With all his trained astuteness—trained in Kinzie's own school, at least—Smith could not be sure that the gray-faced old Westerner was not setting a dual trap for him, after all. But he took the risk, saying, with a decent show of indifference: "Of course it would be more convenient here than in Denver or Chicago. But there is no hurry about that part of it."

The president took a slip of paper from a pocket and wrote rapidly upon it. Once more his opinion was looking keener with prudent caution. It was the optimism, however, that was driving the pen. Baldwin's word was worth something, and it might be disastrous to let these two get away without anchoring their solidity to the Brewster City National.

"Sign this, you two," he said. "I don't know even the name of your new outfit yet, but I'll take a chance on one piece of two-name paper, anyhow."

Smith took up the slip and glanced at it. It was an accommodation note for twenty thousand dollars. With the money fairly in his hands, he paused to drive the nail of independence squarely before he would begin.

"We don't want this at all, Mr. Kinzie, unless the bank's goodwill comes with it," he said with becoming gravity.

"I'll stand by you," was the brusque rejoinder. "But it's only fair to you both to say that you've got the biggest kind of a combination, to buck you—a national utilities corporation with the strongest sort of political backing."

"I doubt if you can tell us anything that we don't already know," said Smith coolly, as he put his name on the note; and when Baldwin had signed: "Let this go to the credit of Timanyoni Ditch, if you please, Mr. Kinzie, and we'll transfer it later. It's quite possible that we shall need it but we are willing to help out a little on your discount profits, anyway. For their along, when things shape themselves up a bit more definitely, you shall know all there is to know, and we'll give you just as good a chance to make money as you'll give us."

When they were safely out of the bank and half a square away from it, Dexter Baldwin pushed his hat back and mopped his forehead. "They say a man can't sweat at this altitude," he remarked. "I'm here to tell you, Smith, that I've lost ten pounds in the last ten minutes. Where in the name of Jumping Jehoshaphat did you get your nerve, boy? You made him believe we'd got outside backing from somewhere."

"I didn't say anything like that, did I?"

"No; but you opened the door and he walked in."

"That's all right; I'm not responsible for Mr. Kinzie's imagination. We were obliged to have a little of verisimilitude; we couldn't turn a wheel without it. Put me in touch with a good business lawyer, and I'll start the legal machinery. When you can get into your car and go around and interview your crowd, man by man, I want to know exactly where we stand with the old stockholders before we make any move in public. Can you do that?"

Baldwin lifted his hat and shoved his fingers through his hair.

"I reckon I can; there are only sixty or seventy of 'em. And Bob Stillings is your lawyer. Come around the corner and I'll introduce you."

CHAPTER X.

The Rocket and the Stick.

For a full fortnight after the preliminary visit to the Brewster City National bank Smith was easily the busiest man in Timanyoni county. Establishing himself in the Hopland House, and discharging the working huml only because he was shrewd enough to dress the new part becomingly, he flung himself into what Colonel Baldwin called the "inmate-working" campaign with a zest that knew no flagging moment.

Within the fourteen-day period new town offices were occupied on the second floor of the Brewster City National building; Stillings, most efficient of corporation counsels, had secured the new charter; and the stock-books of Timanyoni High Land had been opened, with the Brewster City National named as the company's depository and official fiduciary agent.

At the dam the building activities had been generously doubled. An electric light plant had been installed, and Williams was working day and night shifts both in the quarters and on the forges. Past this, the new financial manager, himself broadening rapidly as his field broadened, was branching out in other directions. After a brief conference with a few of his principal stockholders he had instructed Stillings to include the words "Power and Light" in the catalogue of the new company's possible and probable enterprises, and by the end of the fortnight the foundations of a powerhouse were going in below the dam, and negotiations were already on foot with the Brewster city council looking toward the sale of electric current to the city for lighting and other purposes.

Smith had made the planting of his financial anchor securely to windward his first care. Furnished with a selected list by Colonel Baldwin, he had made a thorough canvass of possible investors, and by the time the new stock was printed and ready for delivery through Kinzie's bank, an ironed pool of the majority of the original Timanyoni Ditch stock had been organized, and Smith had sold to Maxwell, Starbuck, and other local capitalists a sufficient amount of the new treasury stock to give him a fighting chance; this, with a promise of more if it should be needed.

Not to Maxwell or to any of the new investors had Smith revealed the full dimensions of the prize for which Timanyoni High Land was being fought. Colonel Baldwin and one William Starbuck, Maxwell's brother-in-law, by courtesy, and his partner in the Little Althe mine, alone knew the wheel within the wheel; how the great eastern utility corporation represented by Stanton had spent a million of more in the acquisition of the beautiful grant, which would be practically worthless as agricultural land without the water which could be obtained only by means of the Timanyoni dam and canal system.

With all these strenuous stirrings in the business field, it may say that Smith found little time for social indulgences during the crowded fortnight. Day after day the colonel begged him to take a night off at the ranch, and it was even more difficult to refuse the proffered hospitality at the weekend. But Smith did refuse it.

It was not until after Miss Corona—driving to town with her father, as she frequently did—had thrice visited the new offices that Smith began to congratulate himself, rather bitterly, at the sure, upon his wisdom in staying away from Ellersport. For one thing he was learning that Corona Baldwin was able to make him see rose-colored. When she was not with him, he was a man in daily peril of meeting the sheriff. But when she was present civil sanity had a way of losing its grip.

Miss Corona's fourth visit to the handsome suite of offices over the Brewster City National changed to suit upon a Saturday. Her father, president of the new company, as he had been of the old, had a private office of his own, but Miss Corona soon found that she was not alone in the new offices. "You win," he said shortly.

"Thank you," she laughed. "The minute or so I'll go back to the present day's office and collect." Then: "One dinner, lodging and breakfast of us was about all you could stand, wasn't it? I thought maybe it would be that way."

"What made you think so?"

She had seated herself in the chair reserved for inquiring investors. There was a little interval of glove-smoothing silence, and then, like a flash out of a clear sky, she smiled across the desk and at him and said:

"Will you forgive me if I ask you a perfectly ridiculous question?"

"Certainly. Other people ask them every day."

"Is your name really and truly John Smith?"

"I—I don't want to tell you," she stammered.

"All right; you needn't."

"If you're going to take it that easy, I will tell you," she retorted. "Mr. Williams thought your name was an alias, and I'm not sure that he doesn't still think so."

"The Smiths never have to have aliases. It's like John Doe or Richard Roe."

"I—I don't want to tell you," she stammered.

"All right; you needn't."

"If you're going to take it that easy, I will tell you," she retorted. "Mr. Williams thought your name was an alias, and I'm not sure that he doesn't still think so."

"The Smiths never have to have aliases. It's like John Doe or Richard Roe."

Roe, you know."

"Haven't you any middle name?"

"I have a middle initial. It is 'M.'"

He was looking her fairly in the eyes as he said it, and the light in the new offices was excellent. Thanks to her horseback riding, Miss Corona's small oval face had a touch of healthy outdoor tan; but under the tan there came, for just a flitting instant, a flush of deep color, and at the back of the gray eyes there was something that Smith had never seen there before.

"It's—it's just an initial?" she queried.

"Yes; it's just an initial, and I don't use it ordinarily. I'm not ashamed of the plain 'John.'"

"I don't know why you should be," she commented, half absently, he thought, and then: "How many John M. Smiths do you suppose there are in the United States?"

"Oh, I don't know; a million or so, I guess."

"I should think you would be rather glad of that," she told him. But when he tried to make her say why he should be glad, she talked pointedly of other things and presently went back to her father's office.

There were fine little beadings of perspiration standing on the fugitive's forehead when she left him.

After the other members of the office force had taken their departure, he still sat at his desk striving to bring himself back with some degree of clear-headedness to the pressing demands of his job. Just as he was about to give it up and go across to the Hopland House for his dinner, William Starbuck drifted in to open the rattling gate and to come and plant himself in the chair of privilege at Smith's desk end.

"Well, son; you've got the animals stirred up good and plenty, at last," he said, when he had found the "mask" and was doffing rolling a cigarette—his one overpowering habit renouncing his one range-riding youth.

"Dick Maxwell got a wire today from his kiddle's grandpa—and my own respected daddy-in-law—Mr. Elfram Fairbairn; you know him—the lumber king."

"I'm listening," said Smith.

"Dick's wire was an order; instruct him from headquarters to keep hands off of your new company and to work strictly in cahoots—harmony—was the word he used—with Crawford Stanton. How does that fit you?"

Groom Carved Niche In Hall of Fame By Pitching Eleven Hitless Innings

It took Bob Groom, veteran pitcher of the St. Louis Browns, nine years to do the stunt, but he finally came across with a record game. He took part in both halves of a double header with the White Sox and pitched eleven consecutive hitless innings in the first game and nine in the second this being a unique stunt. In the seventh inning of the first game Plunk, who had relieved Groom in the fifth, was removed to make room for a pinch hitter, and Fielder Jones called on Groom to finish the game. He did so by letting the Sox down without a blow up to the finish of the contest. Groom appeared to be in such excellent form that Jones nominated him to pitch the second game, and the hurler but no trouble blanking his opponents again without a hit, the Browns winning, 3 to 0.

A TOUGH JOB TO FILL.

Many Have Taken a Fling at First Base For Pittsburgh Pirates. It would seem that the toughest job in the league to fill is that of first baseman for the Pittsburgh club. Since 1905, when Barney Grosz was traded to the Pirates, the present National League umpire, then rated as one of the best players in the game, to Philadelphia for Del Howard, twenty men have had a fling at the position, and none has made a real success of it. In trying to find a man for the job Jimmie Callahan has undertaken a task, which was handed down to him by Fred Clarke.

Since Brann-Bell was shipped to the Phillies, twelve years ago, the following players have at one time or another held down first base for the Bucky City crew: Del Howard, Homer Lilke-brand, Bill Chenev, Joe Neelson, Al Storko, Harry Swarlin, Warren Gill, Jim Kane, Bill Abstein, Jack Flynn, Sam Hyatt, Ed Shapiro, Fred Hunter, Bill McKenzie, Jack Miller, Ed Ketchy, Doc Johnson, Hans Wagner, Bill Hinchman and Warren Adams. Adams, the youngest player on the roster from the Robins on waivers and later purchased by the Robins and sent to Oakland, was the latest prospect to "sliver" and Callahan has been forced to send Hinchman back to the initial sack until another candidate can be dug up.

BAT NELSON WON'T GIVE UP.

Durable Dane Refuses to Quit Despite Fate of Predecessors.

Among those who have known him and admired him for the game heart and ability to stand punishment at which made Battling Nelson lightweight champion of the world, there is nothing but regret that the once durable Dane continues to seek matches in the ring in which he became famous.

The Dane refuses to take heed of the fate of others. Terry McGovern fought when he was through, and it put him in a sanitarium. Ad Wolgast would not give up after others were satisfied he could not come back and when his financial status did not require him to work, and today he is hopelessly broken down, unable to recognize his family or friends.

Nelson has been fighting since 1890, professionally since 1895, when he was sixteen years old. He is thirty-five years old now, and he has been tangled in the ring as no other man ever was mauling before. The stamina and courage which put him on top of the heap will not help now. For while the lion heart remains the stamina is gone. He is burned out by his years of training and fighting. It is pitiable to see the once king of them all reduced to fighting for a pittance.

MILLER HUGGINS' PRIDE.

Predicts Sensational Career For "Mule" Watson, Cardinals' Young Pitcher.

Miller Huggins is proud of the fact that he discovered "Mule" Watson, one of the Cardinals' young pitchers. Watson wandered into Huggins' camp last summer and proceeded to pitch several high class games. But his success was pronounced a flash in the pan, the St. Louis critics declaring that he lacked the necessary headwork.

Watson, however, is back again with the Cardinals and is pitching with the same results. In addition to his tremendous strength, "Mule" is giving up enemy hitters as if he had been a Cardinal for many years. Huggins is counting the big follow every day and predicts a sensational career for him.

CHENEY ADMITS HE IS WILD.

Brooklyn Twirler Has Pitched Only Two Walkless Games.

Larry Cheney, the Brooklyn pitcher, does not deny that he is wild. On the contrary, he acknowledges it. The great spitballer has been in the league five years and makes up for it on the fact that in that time he has pitched two games wherein he gave no bases on balls. One was with Chicago in 1912, the other last year with the Snappers. Larry is at his best when he is wild, but he has the stuff on the ball, and while he keeps the fans guessing with his many passes the opposing team rarely gets the timely hits. Larry gave 105 bases on balls in forty-one games last year, made fifteen wild pitches and hit ten batters, but he allowed only 175 hits and twenty-one runs. He was eighteen out of thirty games. Figuring on his early season form, Larry ought to better this record this year. He is in fine shape and is quite as wild as ever.

Such help as we can give each other in this world is a debt we owe each other.—John Ruskin.

GOES INSANE AFTER BASEBALL OPENING

EXCITEMENT over the opening of the baseball season by Joe Tucker's American association club is believed to have unbalanced the mind of Walter Madden of Columbus. He was found in Goodale park eating grass and clad only in a thin beach shirt and knee trousers. Hat shoes and socks were missing. Madden claimed he was the greatest ball player in the world and was on his way to "Locust," a city of wonderful beauty.

RURAL MEMBERS ARE STIRRED UP

Working on Farmers' Needs and Some New Legislation.

PLAN CHANGE IN DEPARTMENT

Agricultural Representatives Endorse Scheme Which Would Abolish Commission and Create Instead a Farmers' Board With Sweeping Powers. Proposed Fish Code in Senate.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 15.—A state-wide census to determine the farmers' needs and the resources of cities and other populous places has been started. The object is to obtain the highest possible percentage of efficiency in these critical days of scarce food supply.

The plans for the census have been arranged at a conference of the governor, representatives of the departments of labor and agriculture, John C. Frazee, vice chairman of the school mobilization committee, and a committee of agricultural members of the house.

Definite information will be obtained as to the area of the more than 225,000 farms of the state, their present crops, and what percentage of increase could be obtained if adequate labor were supplied.

The census also includes the canneries, and information will be obtained as to what their maximum capacity will be if the necessary labor is obtained.

At an enthusiastic meeting of the rural members of the legislature one day last week a majority decided to raise a protest against the Whitaker bill, placing the appointment of a secretary of agriculture in the hands of the legislature, and to insist that they will press for the plan incorporated in the bill introduced in the senate by Schantz, of Lehigh, and in the house by Lohr, of Somerset.

Would Rip Out Commission.

The Schantz-Lohr plan would rip out the agriculture commission altogether and create a state board of agriculture to be made up of one representative from each of the sixteen counties. This representative would be chosen at a convention of members of the Pennsylvania Association of Agricultural Societies. To be an agriculture society within the meaning of the act would mean any farmers' organization raising at least $50 for the promotion of agriculture.

The state board of agriculture, made up of the sixteen representatives from the counties of the state, would in turn elect an executive committee of seven. This executive committee is empowered by the bill to appoint the secretary of agriculture, dairy and food commissioner, economic zoologist and other attaches of the agriculture department.

The rural members decided to oppose the Whitaker bill and to give right of eminent domain to take quarry products for roads on the ground that it is too broad in its power.

The senate will favor the bill to require men to show tax receipts before being allowed to take out hunters' licenses and those for county boards of assessment for superior means of collection of taxes. The Stevens township code bill was recommended.

New Fish Code.

The new fish code passed by the house with little opposition is expected to go through the senate without great deal of trouble. It has been intended to meet the views of the sportsmen's association in the matter of preventing the stocking of private streams closed to the public with fish from the state hatcheries, and their objection to the limitation of this provision to the trout.

The code has nothing to do with the fishermen's license bill which is a separate measure, but governs the fishing in the inland waters of the commonwealth regulating the seasons, size and creel limits and devices that may be used and codifies the existing laws on these subjects. It takes effect January 1, 1918.

The code forbids the taking of fish in the inland waters if any other way than with rod, hook and line, excepting in tidal waters and in the lower Susquehanna. It forbids the sale of bass, it wipes out the speer, net and etc. It confines the number of hooks to be attached to a line to three; it reduces the trout limit to twenty-five per day; it opens the bass season July 1 instead of June 15; it regulates strictly the catching of bait fish and affects many other reforms that have been long advocated by those desirous of improving the fishing conditions in the inland waters.

The house has defeated the Maurer bill authorizing second and third class cities to engage in farming, including dairy farming, and selling the productions to citizens at cost. This was the first bill presented by the lone Socialist member, Representative Maurer of Berks, to get as far as final passage.

The Reyer bill, providing that one-half of the salary of any county, municipal or school district employee who enlists in the army or navy, shall go to the employee's dependents and one-half to the person who is appointed to fill his place, has passed the senate final and goes to the governor.

A Turkish Love Story. A Turk knocked at his beloved's door, and a voice answered from within, "Who is there?"

"Then he answered, 'It is I.' Then the voice said, 'This house will not hold thee and me.'"

And the door was not opened. Then went the lover into the desert, where there is nothing but Allah, and fasted and prayed in solitude.

And after a year he returned and knocked again at the door.

And again the voice asked, "Who is there?"

And he said, "It is myself."

And the door was opened to him.

Let's Get Serious

We hate to be hurried or worried. We hate to prepare for a future. We like to realize at our ease and opine. That nothing will happen to us. That we are safe for the future. Who tell us there is trouble? Is it right? That every thing's coming out right.

When Noah ginned up at the rain clouds. And settled to work on the ark. The townsmen declared, "He's too easily scared!"

And most of them drowned before dark. We're wakening little by little. But still, as a rule, we're inclined to sit round and wait and grate and debate.

In a pleasant contentment of mind. We like to be happily drowsy. And to hope that the war cloud won't break.

But when trouble once starts we will wish in our hearts. That we all had been plumb wide awake.

Goliath was warned of young David. But he burst into sarcastic mirth. "No kid," exclaimed he, "can put fear into me!"

And there were his last words on earth. James J. Montague in New York American.

HOW CROWDS IN LONDON RECEIVE WOUNDED MEN

Greeted and Cheered With Welcome of Triumphant Heroes Returning Home.

Lowering dusk and a raw wind; dense crowds of gray ambulances lined up in the train shed, a suppressed feeling of emotion—this is how London welcomes "back home" her wounded from the great push.

It was so the other night, Londoners cheered and threw flowers, diners grew cold in a thousand households—but the wounded were greeted with the welcome of triumphant heroes.

By the time the train arrived the audience had grown to two long rows five or ten deep in the train shed and thousands more outside.

The first ambulance sneaked timidly out of the shed, seeming to flinch through the rows of cheering people. The crowd swayed and rippled through the crowd, their cry of "Welcome!"

Peering into the shadowy interior of the crowded ambulance, the crowd saw six men lying on the swinging cots with a nurse stooping over, examining the symptoms of one of them. "Lower him out of the crowd," gently urged the wounded. "Violet and Dorothy, poorly placed, fell under the wheels, but no matter. Their intentions were good. The wounded men propped themselves up and nodded in response to the welcome. One had been shot through the face, for only one eye and a portion of his nose were showing through the bandage. Still, he seemed to smile with that one eye.

Just off the fringe of the throng a little cubbyhole of a cigar store was enjoying a business rush. Two clerks stood out cigarettes in twenty-fives and fifties.

"Gimme hundred Virgins," one white-whiskered man demanded. He grabbed four packages and pushed back to his place on the curb, extracting himself to throw at the wounded men.

Ambulances were filing softly past in regular intervals of half a minute, their headlights flashing on the shiny pavement. Some had a "sitter," a man whose wounds permitted him to sit up in the stretcher. The stretcher was back at the doctor's handkerchief and nurse waited in appreciation of the tribute to the men.

At the last came an ambulance that moved even more carefully than the others. Most people in London have seen one out in France these days, and the particular ambulance obviously carried some one who was very badly hurt. The crowd hushed.

Through the back of the car a doctor was seen bending over a wounded man. A little homely woman in the front rank covertly made the sign of the cross and then smiled up at her son, whose face was disfigured and whose sleeve was marked with the gold stripes showing he had been wounded "doing his bit."

Dickens and a Face Ache. Dickens wanted to be an actor before he was an author. He would have been but for a face ache. When he was a lad and a lawyer's clerk he had attained a trial of his power of producing "character and oddity" before Matthews and Charles Kemble. His face ache kept him at home, and soon after he "made a great splash" as a newspaper reporter. Thereafter he reproduced "character and oddity" on paper instead of the stage.

PAIGE SIX MAKES FINE ECONOMY FUEL TEST RUN

Shows Nineteen Miles to Gallon of Low Grade Gas Under Normal Driving Conditions.

How far will a seven-passenger, six-cylinder car, carrying a normal load, travel on a gallon of gasoline? Opinions vary on this important matter of economy, generally according to the make of the car, the grade of gasoline and the operating conditions.

A well known Paige dealer, however, determined to settle the matter so far as a Paige "Six-51" is concerned, and made an interesting test under conditions which were as nearly normal as possible.

The result was an excellent fuel economy record. The big Paige turned just seventeen miles per gallon. This record is all the more interesting when it is recalled that recently a Paige Six achieved a new record by turning in a score of 22.2 miles in 21 hours on high gear.

The car, known for its fuel economy, had been driven a little more than 1200 miles and no special preparation was made except to be assured that the cylinders were free from carbon and the plugs clean. The speedometer had been officially tested before the run was made. That no special carbon adjustment was made to give an abnormally lean mixture was proved by the car's dead pull in high gear at seven miles an hour on considerable grades.

Gasoline was taken from a regular Standard Oil service station and it was the ordinary low test. The car was driven in and out of the city during the test and the driver kept it at an average of 22 miles an hour as possible. An affidavit of the performance was sworn to by the passengers.

When it is considered that the big Paige weighs about 3400 pounds, carried four hefty men and that the motor is three and one-half inches bore by five and one-quarter inches stroke the seventeen mile record is deserving of special consideration.

To Conduct Normal. A summer normal beginning Monday morning, May 21 and closing July 1, with the teachers' examination given by I. S. Carroll, county superintendent of schools, will be conducted at the Johnson school on the East 12nd street at top, by Frank Jones, supervising principal of the Lower Tyrone and the Conneltsville township schools, and J. C. Beahm, principal of the Gibson high school. The normal will continue for six weeks, with sessions from 8:00 A. M. to 12:30 P. M. Special attention will be paid prospective teachers.

Lancashire Club Will Meet. Mrs. Calvin Martin will entertain the Lancashire Club tomorrow at her home at Nellie.

Do Not Measure Our Success by the Failure of Others

READ CAREFULLY AND CONSIDER

The combined treatments used by the Philadelphia Specialists are the latest treatments known to modern science, and these new combined treatments have done more for chronic sufferers than was ever expected by the patients themselves.

THE CRY OF NATURE

Is for help and relief from the burdens imposed upon her by people not qualified to allow their systems to perform their functions of life in a natural way, but must crowd and push and lay extra burdens upon their bodies until Nature in dire distress calls for help. If help is then refused, then comes the weakening and undermining of the body and health and a man and woman begin to pay the penalty of their indifference and excesses, whether in their work or pleasure, and experienced that "dragged out" feeling and its associate life.

The dark rings around the dull eyes, the loss of memory, dragging pains, constipation, nervous feeling, nervous work, despondent, loss of appetite, vitality and energy, wastings from all diseases, catarrhal diseases of all organs, kidney pain and bladder troubles, weak spells, dizziness and a host of other complaints.

"HELP WANTED!" This is what every man, woman or child wants that is suffering from some form of chronic, nervous or complicated disease.

HOW AND WHERE TO OBTAIN IT

Is the next question that comes to the minds of persons suffering from disease. Especially is this so if you have suffered for some time and have been disappointed and have not been cured. Give us a person broken down from worry, care, dissipation, hard work, organic weakness, nervous diseases, mental anxiety, weak back and kidneys, bladder troubles, stomach liver and bowel troubles, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, skin diseases and a host of other troubles, and let them take the perfected combined treatments we will give them, and you will see improvement at once, and we will make strong vigorous and healthy people of them, providing your disease is curable. What more can be done.

THE ASSASSIN

Is not more steadily in his prey upon the public than are certain diseases in their attack upon the constitution and health of the individual.

The aches and pains you suffer in nature's warning and if you do not heed the cry, the disease will steal on you like a thief at night, and rob you of the strength and vitality which should be yours.

NEGLECT

Has been the cause of many incurable diseases and the patients have no one to blame but themselves. Had nature's warnings, do not neglect, but remember the old saying, A stitch in time.

"FOR LIFE"

Offenses against the laws of health are punished rigorously and inevitably by Nature. A person may break civil laws and pay a large penalty, but the person who transgresses Nature's laws of health cannot escape the penalty. Many a man and woman is today a "patient" for life and often a very short life, because he or she outraged the laws upon which health is dependent.

That dull and fatigued brain, those dark rings around the eyes, the rattled skin, the anxious face, dull pain in back or head; sleep condition, always dirty, dragging pains across the kidneys between the shoulders and down the legs; weak spells; loss of all ambition and life, all indicate debility and general loss of vitality from some disease.

BE FREE

Liberty is to be obtained in the use of the Philadelphia Specialists' combined treatment.

WHOSE FAULT IS IT?

You continue to suffer from ailments of long standing. Did you ever ask yourself that question? Have you honestly made that effort to regain your health that is due to your family and your business interests?

No person in ill health can be successful. They lack that vitality, that physical endurance which enables the healthy to push to a successful conclusion such enterprises as will insure to family a comfortable competence for their old age.

You have not consulted us, regarding that condition you have suffered from for so long and which is daily entangling you system more and more. Putting off from day to day will not make your cure any easier. Don't if you have been treated and still suffer, you must remember that all treatments are not alike, and you must also remember that all physicians do not make the same diagnosis.

If your disease still troubles you, call at the offices of the Philadelphia Specialists at Smith House, Conneltsville, Thursday of each week and their combined treatments cannot be had anywhere else in Conneltsville and the new method employed by the doctors enable them to make a correct diagnosis.

IT'S YOUR FAULT

If you have neglected yourself or if you have allowed your self to become discouraged because you have failed to be cured, the reasons stated above perhaps fit your very case, and if that is so, there is only one thing for you to do, that is,

TRY AGAIN!

Consult the Philadelphia specialists and let them explain to you their new combined treatments and what it will do for you. It may be the very treatment required in your case to
